PURPOSE

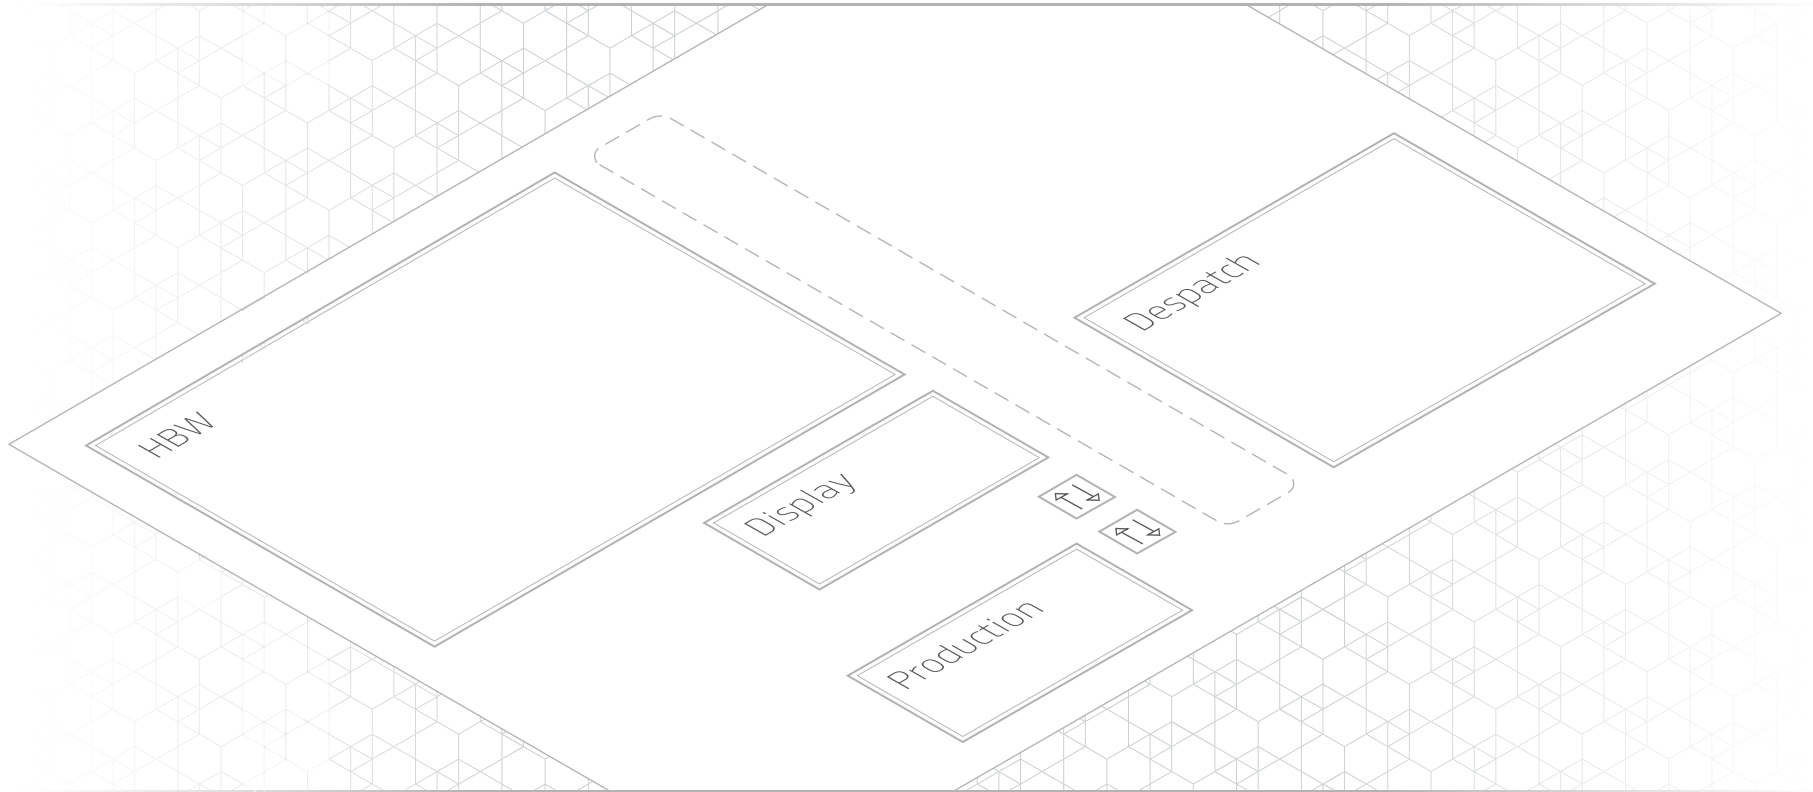

- > Within just 8 years, the Störtebeker Braumanu-faktur has increased its production output from 60,000 to a good 300,000 hectolitres and is today selling its beers almost nationwide at food and beverage retailers.
- > So as to actually achieve this target, however, Störtebeker had no alternative but to invest in its existing production landscape. In 2016, the company expanded its brew-house capacities in a first step. The second was to increase output levels in the bottling hall as well while simultaneously optimising its logistical processes.
- > For this purpose, Störtebeker purchased a 40,000-square-metre plot right next to its existing headquarters, where the company was able to translate its vision of a greenfield project into shopfloor reality.

TIMELINE

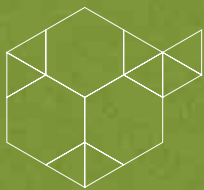

„We decided to place the entire new construction work in the hands of two contractors: the first being the company building the hall and the second being Krones assuming overall responsibility for the technology involved. With this investment, we have taken another significant step into our future, and we hope to be well positioned as a result.“

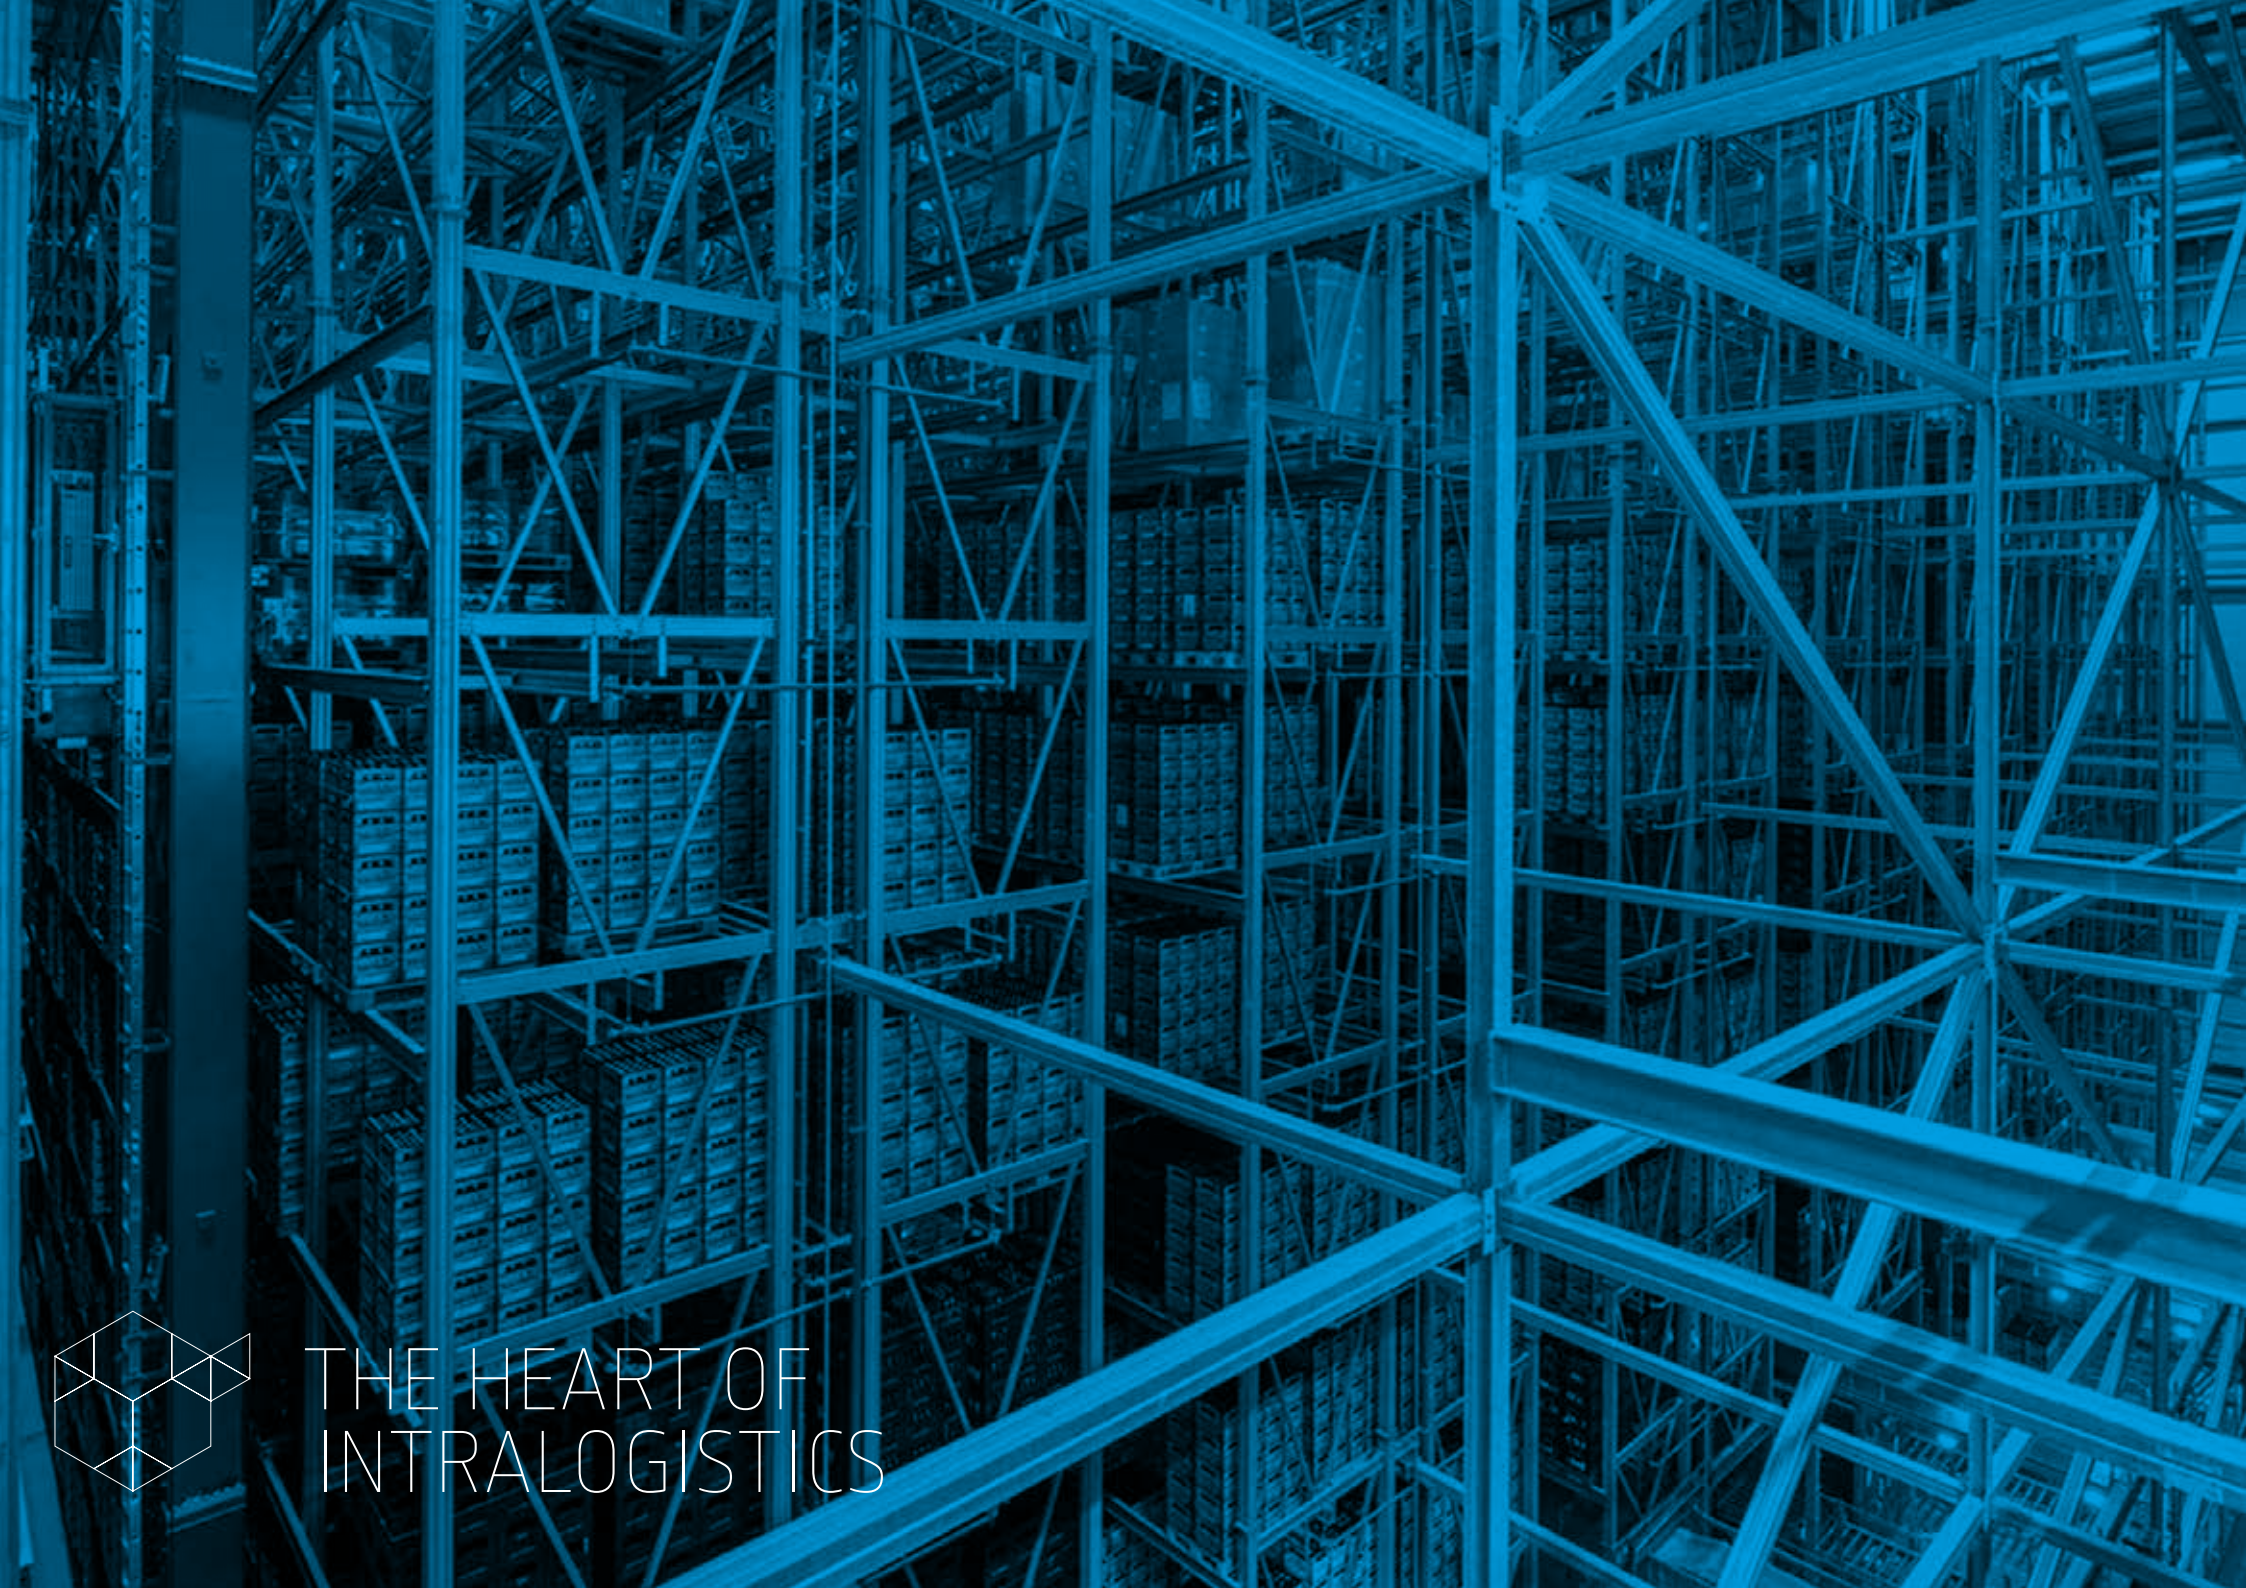

Jürgen Nordmann (Owner & Managing Director Störtebeker)
